As chair of the teaching evaluation committee, my plan for 2019–2020 was to discuss teacher evaluation research during the spring semester. (Departmental and college service duties kept me busy in the fall.) Unfortunately, COVID-19 derailed my plans for spring.

Now that the spring semester is winding down, I have time to post various teaching evaluation research articles at the Canvas site I have created for the teaching evaluation committee. I will notify the committee members once the material is posted. Some members may want to start looking at this research over summer, but, in any case, it will be in place when we start again in fall.
